

ABSTRACT

In the present invention, lactic acid bacteria produce soluble factors (such as peptides or proteins) that block inflammatory responses in a mechanism that depends on G proteins and is post-transcriptional to effectively block protein production or secretion by cells.